3rd August 2010, 03:22. I've just got my '06 Sportster 883 XL with 7k miles on the clock. Bike runs great but has a ticking noise coming out from an engine (probably the front cylinder but it's hard to determine). The noise is constant, easy to recognize but not too loud. It is there all the time from the moment engine starts no matter if bike is cold or warm.

I have an 86 sportster 883, the engine makes a noise that sounds like the piston is hitting the head or spark plug but doesn't show signs of damage. I was told by a Harley mechanic that the bike sounds great though. I thought it might be cause the engine is hard mounted and not rubber mounted. do you know what is making that noise.

As found in a cam-in-block engine, lifters are responsible for transmitting the movement of the camshaft lobes to the pushrods. The pushrods actuate the rocker arms, which open the valves. Hydraulic lifters allow the valve lift to increase with engine rpm by filling up with oil as the oil pressure rises. The oil ...

~~Sportster Engine Noise - abcd.rti.org~~

The noise is similar to a metallic knock, as if the piston were "slapping" the cylinder wall during its stroke. As with most engine noise, understanding the cause of the noise will help you imagine what the noise sounds like. An indication of piston slap is a decrease in noise as the engine warms up.
